Responding to the Challenge of Pope Francis' Laudato Si' on Care for Our Common Home In June 2015, Pope Francis issued a letter to all people on our common home, the earth, urging us to take action to address the major environmental crises of our day – climate change, loss of biodiversity, pollution, deforestation and more. Has Pope Francis got it right? What are the implications of his letter for us individually and as a nation? What public policy should we support? Who are "the poor" we should be listening to when we discuss issues like climate change? Come, listen and share on these and many more vital questions. If you would like to attend a Panel Discussion on Tuesday 10 November please refer to the notice on the white noticeboard.
